Panel to discuss myths of assisted-living transition

EDMOND, Okla. — Moving into a community offering assisted living often can be fraught with uncertainty and myths, from leaving your home, possibly disconnecting from your friends and even losing some of your independence.

Touchmark at Coffee Creek in Edmond will dispel some of the misnomers associated with this issue during its “Myths of Assisted Living” session at 6 p.m. on July 10.

The educational session will feature panelists of experienced professionals and current residents receiving assisted-living services at Touchmark, 2801 Shortgrass Road in Edmond.

“Such a life transition comes with many questions and opinions,” says Touchmark Executive Director Melissa Mahaffey. “This session will help provide answers and information to help ease the decision-making process.”

All are invited and asked to RSVP to 405-340-1975. Refreshments will be served.
