Director's Corner

One year ago, I became an American citizen. On June 5th, I voted for the first time in my adoptive country. It was important to me to have a vote in the future of our nation. And so I voted. The right to vote is not something that should be taken lightly. We fought a war against those dastardly British so we could determine our own future. And innumerable fellow Americans, since Independence, have fought and died for the right to vote.

Our country is so divided right now that it is hard to avoid the constant news cycle of controversy, accusations and recriminations. But as we celebrate the 4th of July, I hope we can have some respite, and focus on what unites us rather than what divides us.

I want to wish all of my fellow American citizens a wonderful, happy, joyous and peaceful Independence Day.

David
